MODEL WIFE TELLS THE I ENT COURT SHE DOESN'T

Mrs. Steinig Doesn't Even Know What Time "Fred" Gets Home at Night.

NOR WHEN HE GETS UP.

And as to Where He Works and His Salary-Gracious,

Don't Ask Her!

The Model Wife made her appearance before United States Commissioner Gilchrist this morning. She is Mrs. Sayde Carruthers Steinig, spouse of Frederick Steinig of No. 615 Caldwell avenue, the Bronx, who was in business as a wholesale provision merchant at No. 395 Columbus avenue, until three of his creditors filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against him in the United States District Court.

Little Mrs. Steinig, who is just past eighteen, appeared to testify as to her husband's financial status. Her replies to the questions propounded to her by & representative of the law firm of Mc-Lear & McLear, attorneys for Mr. Steinig's creditors, revealed her as a paragon of wifely complacency for "she knew not what her husband did with his money nor did she ask him prying questions anent the same."

In addition to her charms of disposition. Mrs. Steinig laid claim to more then passing consideration by virtue of a figure petite, a wealth of glistening black hair, coiled within a chic "chicken nat;" a smoothly rounded cheek of the color and texture of a full blown peach; big violet eyes; and a ready smile that evealed two rows of gleaming white

"I don't know." "Well, then, Mrs. Steinig, how much is his salary?"

Oh," said Mrs. Steinig represchfully. "I wouldn't ask him an embarrassing question like that. He gives me a certain amount every week and I'm perfectby satisfied with my allowance."

"How much did he get for his Colum bus evenue business, when he sold it to loseph Ungar on Jan. 13?"

"All I know is that he got quite a lot for it. But I don't know what he did criticism to the women of New York. with the money. I hate to bother Fred. so I haven't even asked him the name of his bank. No, he has never told me A WOMAN WILL BELIEVE ANY whether anyone owes him any money." Well, what time does your husband set up in the morning?" "Mr. Lawyer," returned Mrs. Steinig charply, "I wouldn't pry into my husband's private affairs like that. At I know is that when I get up in the morning he is gone."

"Who gets his breakfast?"

"That is his private affair, too. know I don't. Maybe he gets his breakfast outside. You see, the our apartment in the morning, so it'e altogether too cold for me to think of getting up and getting a breakfast.

And our present arrangement seems to suit Fred perfectly."

SHE DOESN'T KNOW WHEN HUBBY GETS HOME. "Well," inquired the desperate at torney, "tell me, please, when Mr Steinig comes home at night."

Mrs. Steinig pondered. "I couldn't exactly say," one an

The New York Man Is a Human Refrigerator With His Heart Kept in Cold Storage

"He Likes to Pose as a Regular Devil, but, Believe Me, He's More Like a Clam, and His Worst Fault Is Cold-Bloodedness," Writes "Hildegarde."

"I See Bedizened Women Sitting at the Feet of Hindu Fakirs, Holding Hands with Greasy Palmists, While Churches Are Empty," Declares "Old Fogy."

W HAT is the matter with the New York woman? One masculine reader who has taken a peep into the answers that she does not go to church. "A woman without religion is like a flower without perfume," he quotes approvingly, leaving us to conclude that the girl of the period is as lacking in sweetness as the artificial orchids in her corsage bouquet.

Now whether or not he is a church member, no person can regard with approval the kind of woman who withdraws her faith from religion to place it with the fortune teller, the palmist, the crystal gazer or the Hindu swaml. And one look in the Mirror of Meditation must show us a horde of women, young and old, who haven't faith enough to go to church, but who accept the word of a greasy, unwashed fakir charging them from fifty cents to $5 for a "reading," with a blind faith they refuse to the law and the gospel. Ever, now and then somebody remarks that New York is a pagan city whose inhabitants believe in nothing. Yet the paimists continue to do a thriving business, the clairvoyants are besieged with patrons anxious to be told to "distrust the dark man" or to "beware of a treacherous woman

As a matter of fact, New York believes in everything except the things which may be true, after all. A prophet may be without honor among us, but a fakir can do a land office business any time. I do not think The Evening Work reader is altogether fair in confining his

THING IF IT COST ENOUGH. Dear Madam: Peeping into the Lenten Looking Glass at the New York woman I see a lot of dedizened creatures crowding around cart tables, sitting at the feet of Hindu fakirs, holding hands with greasy paimists, while the churches are empty and spiders have spun their webs across their doors. It is folly to contend that a scientific age has done away with ancient forms of beging them to take their money away from them. You can make the New York woman believe in any thing if it costs her enough. She says she is too thred to go to church on Sunday, but if she would get up early, dress and go to mass or whatever service she should attend, she would not be nearly so fat as she is to-day and she would be a much more useful and contented woman. There is an old saying that a woman without religion is like a flower without perfume. I believe it, and a great many other men teel as 1 do. Ot.D POGY.

Dear Madam: I have taken a look at the New York man in the Lenten Looking Glass, and I must say he is the most selfish, self-satisfied creature I have ever seen. Be ne ever so nomely or small he thinks no girl is good enough to take out unless like a queen. Nine times out of ten he has no matrimonial intentions. When he has it is generally because the girl is an heiress.

The New York fellow asks himself about everything. "What is there in it for me?" and, if the answer be satisfactory, he proposes. If not, he takes up a poor girl's time for a few years and then marries for money or stays an old bachelor. I think the modern man's worst tault is his cold bloodedness. He likes to pose as a regular devil, but, believe me, he is far more of a clam. He is so afraid that some woman is going to get him to commit himself to a proposal that when he is in feminine natural and hearty as he is with

Even when he so far forgets himself as to try to hold a girl's hand or even to king her, he acts as if he had hired a lawyer to defend him or put his property in his father's name before he indulges himself to

The real reason so many American women marry foreigners is that foreigners care far more for women than Americans do. And a woman would rather have a man who is ardent, even if a little impertment, than one who is respectful mainly because he is indifferent. The New York man as I have studied him is a human refrigerator with a cold storag
